Mr. J. A. Thurston suffered his third loss by fire within the past three years last Sunday afternoon when his mill boarding house at Swan's Corner was completely destroyed. Fire caught shortly after one o'clock and before it was discovered the flames were beyond control. The house was insured for $250.00 but the loss to Mr. Thurston will be very much more than this amount.

The News is pleased to say that Mr. Chase is succeeding admirably with his work in connection with the illustrated number which will be issued in the near future. The fact that this number is not designed to be a personal advertising medium but is designed to give a lift to Bethel, should and has won for it a place in the hearts of all of Bethel's loyal and enthusiastic citizens. It will contain a pleasing sketch of Bethel touching all the features which conspire to make it "Ideal Bethel" and should, yea, does appeal to all who have a warm spot in their hearts for our town and are interested in its standing and growth. A large edition will be published and scattered through the country. Let any who are interested send us a list of names of those who would be interested in receiving a copy or who by receiving a copy, might become interested in Bethel as a resting place. The News is interested to touch such people. You should be. Let us hear from you.

Some one must have picked up the purse that was lost last week and advertised in the News. We have usually been fortunate in finding for our readers lost articles of this kind and will find the purse in question if it was picked up by an honest person. The person who lost it can ill afford to lose such a sum and it is sincerely hoped that the finder will report at once to the News office.

At the Congregational Church, next Sunday the pastor will give a ten minute prelude to the morning sermon, on the good deeds of the week, as reported in the daily papers. At seven o'clock the topic of the pastor's twenty minute address will be "Does Bethel need a Missionary?" Topic of the Christian Endeavor Meeting at half-past seven o'clock "An Evening with Japanese Missions." An interesting service is in preparation. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mr. W. C. Munroe who was called to Bethel Saturday, by the illness of his wife, returned Monday, taking his son with him. Mrs. Munroe who is slowly recovering, will remain some time longer before returning to her home in Everett, Mass.

Shaw Records.

In 1892 Mrs. Harriet F. Farwell, sister of Hon. E. S. Kilborn of Bethel, entered upon the arduous task of writing a genealogy of the Shaw family. She had made little progress in her undertaking before she discovered, that, instead of one or two immigrants by that name, there were seven or eight distinct branches of Shaws in this country and that a history that should do justice to all would indeed be a very large book; she therefore decided to confine her work to the one particular branch of which she herself is a part, that which has its origin in Roger Shaw who was born Aug. 26, 1594 in London, England, and who first appears in written history as a prominent citizen of Cambridge, Mass., in 1636.

Mrs. Farwell has spent a large portion of her time during these past eleven years upon this work and has succeeded in getting together authentic material for one of the most complete genealogical works that has ever been published. Her ambition was to make the work complete, but the task proved to be an absolute impossibility, as has been true in the case of all similar works. She says her only consolation lies in the fact that the first complete one is yet to appear, and that even this fact furnishes but little consolation to her.

The work is practically at a close and is being printed at the News office. It is very ably written and well arranged and will be the most readable genealogy that we have ever seen. It contains not only the statistical work which must be had in all genealogical works but every page is brightened by incidents and interesting biographical sketches while the whole work is enlivened by anecdotes, old documents, etc., some of which are reproduced in their original and unique forms.

One of the commendable features of the work is the originality of the author. She has studied genealogy after genealogy and has finally settled upon a form and style all her own, and one which can but commend the work to all who see it.

It will contain about four hundred pages; will be printed on extra quality paper, bound in good substantial binding and will be suitably illustrated. The work will be first class in every way and will stand second to none of the genealogies which have preceded it. It will be ready for delivery in about three months and will be sold at the moderate price of $3.00 per copy.

The only safe, reliable, vegetable remedy for worms in children or adults. 25c at your druggist. DR. J. F. TRUE & CO., Auburn, Me.

5. A love story and the beautiful act of the Matron of the Emigrant Home in Boston, who reconciled two estranged lovers, to found another good American family in our West.

6. The death of Mrs. Alice Gulick, calling attention to her Mission school for girls in Spain, where there are now 3000 girls; the result of thirty years' faithful labor.

7. The annual report of the Congregational Foreign Missionary Society (that sent Mrs. Gulick to her prosperous work) showing debts all paid and a small balance to the good.

8. Alabama House of Representatives passes a law to abolish Sunday games, proving that the religious principle is not altogether foreign to Legislation.

9. The Salvation Army undertaking a new mission to the poor whites of Kentucky and Tennessee.

10. The address of Pope Pius X, in which he turned the reverence of the laboring men of Rome, from himself to God. The whole attitude and action of the new pope seems to indicate a man of simple christian faith and love, whose influence on the world will be for truer christian living.

After the prelude, the pastor gave a very practical sermon on Temperance, showing the benefits of the Prohibition law and the folly of Re-submission; of which a fuller report may be given in our next issue.

The Vice of Intemperance.

The Christian Work and Evangelist, in commenting upon the Sunday School Lesson of September 20th, says:

Of all the vices enumerated, that of winebibbing, revelings carousings, drunkenness, is the most frequent and frightful source of evil. Any remedy for this great evil, to be effectual, must be one that goes to the root of the matter; and it will not take long to discern that the most potent causes in the perpetuation of this monstrous evil are the drinking usages of society, which associate the use of the wine cup with all that is happy and hopeful in domestic life, and all that is delightful in social intercourse. The moderate daily domestic drinking of the respectable and respected must be regarded as the fountain-head, the prolific source, the support and the supply of that widespread and alarming vice which impedes the progress of Christianity, blights the blessedness of many a happy home, and mars and mutilates the strength and glory of manhood, as it defiles and disfigures the beauty and purity of womanhood.

No man suddenly becomes a drunkard. The habit must be formed, and in many cases the process is imperceptibly slow but insidiously sure. Very few men continue to use intoxicating drinks moderately without imminent danger of forming intemperate habits. The use of alcoholic drinks has a natural tendency to produce an appetite for them; and no man can reasonably expect to continue such use and avoid contracting a strong desire for them. It ruthlessly drags its victims from every quarter, and its malignant reign casts a shadow over us all.

It is said that the liquor saloons of this (New York) city would line both sides of a street ten miles in length, extending from the Battery into Westchester County, and that out of every 100,000 arrests more than four-fifths are caused by drink. All the crimes on the earth do not destroy as many of the human race nor alienate so much property as drunkenness. So strikingly obvious are the blighting effects of drunkenness on the welfare of a people, that few, if any, will question that poverty and distress in any community will be found to be in proportion to the facilities furnished for the sale of intoxicating drinks.

Common observation confirms the statement that a very large proportion of the crime pauperism and misery, the ignorance, squalor and wretchedness, the juvenile vagrancy homelessness and depravity, exhibited in our streets and revealed in our police reports and daily journals, is the necessary and inevitable result of the liquor traffic, which is supported and protected by the drinking usages of the day.

The mind can hardly grasp the full significance of these enormous figures, and this is but the smallest item in the total aggregate. These figures represent the direct and indirect cost of the liquor traffic in the United States in the fiscal year 1901: Amount paid for liquors by consumers, $1,000,000,000; value of grain, etc., destroyed, $33,497,641; cost of crime, insanity, pauperism, etc., chargeable to liquor traffic, $137,762,220; loss of productive labor, $1,062,500,000; shortened lives, $147,000,000; misdirected work, $354,000,000. Total, $2,678,604,864. Revenue from liquor traffic (1890): Internal revenue, $107,695,610; customs, $5,518,081; State and local revenues, $24,780,496, a total of $141,000,487. Net loss, $2,537,604,377.

In these figures the items chargeable to the liquor traffic, with the exception of the official figures, are very moderate, and many things which might very properly be included are entirely omitted, because of the difficulty of putting them into dollars and cents. But as they stand, who can help being appalled at the awful significance of these figures!

For this cause was the Gospel preached, to judge them, to reprove them for the corruption of their nature and the viciousness of their lives while living after the lusts of the flesh and following the inclinations of their depraved appetites, and that having mortified their sins they might thereafter live new lives—a new and spiritual life, in accordance with the righteous will of God.

Incidents from the State Convention.

The twenty-ninth annual convention of the Maine W. C. T. U. was held September 15-17, in the Peoples' Baptist church in Dover. Very little idea of the beauty and prosperity of these "Twin Cities" on the Piscataquis river would we have, had we depended upon what we could see as we wandered our way between the Dover House and the church. But on Friday we drove about the place—to the little cottage surrounded by tall pines in which Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens first saw the light of day—to the camp grounds which compare favorably with those at Old Orchard—passed the several mills, woolen, dye, etc., which in a measure, account for the prosperity so apparent in most of the residences. Another reason is the fact that no liquor is sold here according to statements made in the meetings, such as is used being brought into the place by the consumers.

The weather was like the welcome—warm as could be desired. Hon. W. E. Parsons gave the address of welcome for the towns of Dover and Foxcroft, Rev. H. W. Norton in behalf of the churches, and Mrs. Clara M. Evans in behalf of the local W. C. T. U., to all of which Mrs. Gertrude Stevens Leavitt responded. The President's address was given Tuesday evening, and was devoted largely to the subject of re-submission. She contrasted the recent Bangor convention with the meetings at Old Orchard, when Congressman Littlefield and President Bushford were among the speakers; and she asked the pertinent question: "Do you know of any law which annihilates the evil against which it is framed?" The Prohibitory law at its worst, even in Bangor, is better than any form of license. Having been in nearly every State of the Union, she was in a position to judge as to the working of the various License and Local Option laws. Recently, in Marion, Ind., a lad in the family in which she was entertained, came home in a state of great excitement, saying that he saw a crowd in front of a "gilded saloon," so he went over to see what was going on. The saloon keeper who had sworn that he would not sell to drunkards, and his bartender, were bending over the prostrate form of a man from whose face they were trying to wash the smut with which they had besmeared him while in a state of intoxication, in order to make fun for the frequenters of the saloon. They had become frightened, fearing the man would die, as he did. Better a thousand times the "kitchen bar-room" and the "blind tiger," bad as they are, than the "gilded saloon." "And I beg the tigers' pardon whenever I use that expression."

The editor of the Piscataquis Observer and all the ministers of the two towns were introduced to the convention, including Miss Earl, pastor of the Universalist church, and Dr. Hardy of the Congregational church, brother to the former pastor of our Bethel church. The latter was particularly emphatic in his denunciation of Dr. Lyman Abbott's article in a recent copy of the Outlook, in which he declared that most of the ministers in Maine favored re-submission. "How that man, born in Maine and spending many of his vacations here, could make such a statement as that, is incredible!" Rev. Mr. Johnnet of Somerset county, was introduced and when inquiry was made as to the spelling of his name, the president of that county, Mrs. Chandler, related an incident which would

Doan's Kidney Pills,

A Modern Medicine for Every Kidney Ill.

Mr. T. H. Hughes, of Saxtons River, Vt., employed by B. F. Locke & Co. says: "My kidneys did not act properly for years, and it gradually grew on me. For two or three years they troubled me very much with a dull, aching pain across my back and in my loins. If I stood on my feet for any length of time, I felt the pain across my back more and my legs became numb. When the pain in my back got so bad that I could stand it no longer, I put on plaster, and I used a great many of them, but they only afforded me temporary relief. I also used medicines of all kinds, but they did not reach the cause. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised, and so well recommended that I was induced to give them a trial, and I got them at Andrew's drug store. They gave me immediate relief. After the treatment I seldom felt any symptoms of my former troubles, but when I did I took a few Doan's Kidney Pills and it soon left me. My rheumatic pains were not so severe, and I did not have that tired, languid feeling. I had more energy in doing my work and gave all the credit to Doan's Kidney Pills. They did me a great deal of good, and I feel justified in recommending them to others as a good and reliable medicine."

help to fix the name in one's memory. Mr. Johnnet when outworking one day, overtook a small boy and after a short conversation, the latter asked the reverend gentleman his name; after telling him, Mr. Johnnet asked, "And what is your name, my lad?" receiving the unexpected reply, "My name is bumble-bee!" The Somerset pastor told of a hotel in that county which had become notorious for its illegal liquor selling, but now the proprietor is taking a vacation in jail where it is to be hoped that he will sober off in more ways than one.

The reports of the many superintendents were interesting and encouraging, but only one can be referred to here, that of a comparatively new department. Mrs. Estelle Benson Stanley who is owner and proprietor of the Stanley House at South West Harbor, is superintendent of work among the children of ighthouse keepers. There are about three hundred of these children in Maine who are isolated and deprived of educational and other privileges, unacknowledged by town, State and country. Two of these children were with her and sang a very suitable and pathetic song which had been written especially for them.

The Memorial Service was led by Mrs. Hall of Rockland, Miss Belle Downs of Houlton, superintendent of the Flower Mission, reading the long list of those who have passed away during the last year, including one of our Bethel honorary members, Deacon T. H. Chapmau. Miss Sarah Monroe Hall, musical director of the Maine W. C. T. U., sang "Face to Face," as she had sung it at the World's Convention in Geneva, Switzerland. Throughout the convention her sweet singing was an inspiration. Mrs. Nellie Burger of Missouri, delivered the address Thursday evening, her subject being, "Christ or Barabbas—the Prohibitory or License Law." Very impressive was it when five small boys were brought to the platform, and referring to the remark made in a Liquor Dealers' convention, that an appetite must be created in the boys, in order to prosper their trade and that nickels spent now in treats to the boys would bring dollars to their treasuries later, and also one out of every five boys in our land becomes a drunkard, she asked: "Which of these do you choose to fill a drunkard's grave?" Ah! no parent can choose that his or her boy shall thus have his life blighted and his soul lost. Mrs. Burger was present during the entire convention, and gave several recitations. As we joined hands, while singing the parting hymn, "God be with you till we meet again," all felt that this had been one of the most successful of the Maine W. C. T. U. conventions.

TOPICS OF THE HOUSEHOLD.

Finnan haddie prepared in an old Scotch way makes an appetizing dish for breakfast, luncheon or supper. Scald the fish by dipping it quickly into hot water, and remove the skin and all the bones. Chop the meat fine—Scotch housewives reduce it to a paste with pestle and mortar. Season with a little lemon juice, salt, pepper, melted butter and a spoonful or two of cream. Cook, stirring constantly, until the mixture thickens. Then pour it over moistened and buttered toast. Finnan haddie may be baked or broiled. To bake finnan haddie, spread it with butter, put a little water in the bottom of the pan, and cook ten or fifteen minutes. If it is to be broiled, oil the broiler, cook the fish over hot coals, and when done spread with butter or serve with maitre d'hotel sauce.

It is an up-country habit to boil salt codfish and potatoes together and accompany them with cream sauce served in a separate dish. For the spring of the year this is a wholesome dish. Soak a pound of the fish in two or three waters (cold). The potatoes, according to old housekeepers, are best for this purpose if boiled in their skins. Wash and scrub them thoroughly, cutting away all defects, and soak them in ice-water or very cold water for half an hour. The last process restores an old potato to its original crispness. Put potatoes and fish, the latter left whole or in large pieces, into a kettle of boiling water and cook until tender. Have ready a hot platter, pile the fish in the centre, arrange the potatoes, denuded of their jackets, around it, and sprinkle lightly with chopped parsley. Make a cream sauce of a cupful of rich milk, a tablespoonful each of butter and flour, and salt and pepper. Add a little chopped parsley or a hard boiled egg cut into small dice.

Salt mackerel may be boiled, baked or broiled. For either of the processes freshen it by soaking in cold water. Then, if it is to be broiled, dry it thoroughly and cook on an oiled broiler.

To boil it, put it into a shallow pan and add a quarter of a cupful of hot water, a tablespoonful of vinegar or the juice of half a lemon, a half teaspoonful of salt and a slice or two of onion, if it is wanted. A small piece of bay leaf also may be used. Simmer slowly for fifteen or twenty minutes.

If the mackerel is to be baked, put a little water into a baking pan, spread the fish with butter, and cook about twenty minutes.

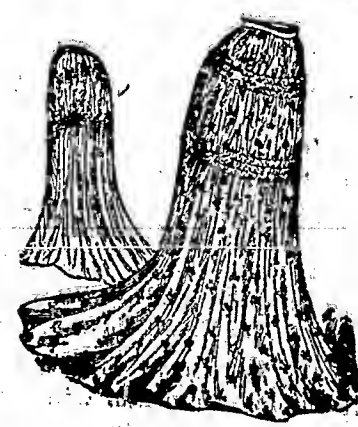

Salt codfish may be creamed, boiled or used for fish cakes, to which it is particularly well adapted. For creamed codfish, cook a cupful of finely shredded fish in two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter for two minutes spoonfuls of flour and cook four minutes without browning. Add two tablespoonfuls of milk and stir until the sauce thickens. Half cream may be used to advantage with the milk. One reason that so many persons scorn creamed codfish is that it too often appears in a sauce that is cream by name only. A correct appellation for the usual sort would be paste. Codfish is far from rich in itself, and demands a generous seasoning of butter.

To prepare maitre d'hotel sauce for any fish, rub two tablespoonfuls of butter to a cream and incorporate a drop at a time, two tablespoonfuls of lemon juice, a tablespoonful of chopped parsley and a teaspoonful of nutmeg. So many persons object to nutmeg that it is omitted by many cooks. Horseshead butter is made in the same way, except grated horseshead and a little paprika are used in place of the lemon juice, parsley and nutmeg. It is well adapted to fish dishes, especially at this season of flagging appetites.

SHIRRED SKIRT.

Falls in Graceful Folds and Very Stylish.

The waist consists of a fitted lining, front, backs and yoke. The front is tucked diagonally, and seamed at the centre and blouses slightly over the belt. The backs are drawn down snugly at the waist line and are tucked on horizontal lines. The yoke is separate and arranged over the whole. When desired the lining can be omitted in both waist and sleeves. The sleeves are made with the upper portions which are tucked at the lower edge and the full parts that are gathered at both upper and lower edges and are finished with straight cuffs at the wrists. At the neck is a regulation stock.

The quantity of material required for the medium size is 4 yards 21 inches wide, 3-12 yards, 27 inches wide, 3 yards 32 inches wide or 2-14 yards 44 inches wide, with 3-4 yards of all over lace.—May Mantion.

MAKES ODD PATTERNS IN SILK.

A Young Woman Who Finds Designs Successful.

A young woman who has unusual success as a designer of silks keeps in her studio what amounts to almost a small museum of the objects which have furnished suggestions to her. Especially does she value a particularly pretty specimen of Jersey ore from the blending of colors in which she derived some twelve or fourteen designs for men's scarfs and cravats. Patterns so pleasingly out of the ordinary took at once with the manufacturers and were duplicated by the thousand all through the country.

Odd souvenirs of country rambles are niched in with the drawings and silk samplers in this studio where a number of assistants help to fill orders—pressed and mounted butterflies, a block from the heart of a tree showing the curling grain fibres and curious knots, specimens of bark and fungi, sprays of sea moss, pieces of plant roots are brought forward as resplendent colored galls and twisted responsible for good selling designs.

"The markings and 'blendings' on the skins of live beasts; the structure of flower cups and the plumage of fowls and birds are sources that never fail. It pays the practical designer to be something of a botanist and woodcraftsmen and to frequent out-of-the-way places."

"I got a design for a pretty light evening silk from the coloring of some fresh water fish alive and lustrous. Some new lawn boards furnished an other pattern of dress silk, and I hit upon a unique design for wall drapery through observing a fichen-covered log which was almost ready to crumble into mould.

WHAT A TRUE WOMAN IS.

A true woman will not believe unkind things about her dearest friend.

A true woman will go to a friend and tell her her failings and mistakes in a spirit of love, rather than talk about them and find fault behind her back.

A true woman will always look for the good points in a person's character and will dilate on these, if she has anything to say about her. There are always enough women to pick flaws even in saintly characters.

A true woman is entirely unselfish. She rejoices with others in their joys and weeps with them in their sorrows. She does not envy those more fortunate than herself, and is the first to offer congratulations on good fortune.

A true woman is broadminded and tolerant. She listens patiently to the arguments of others, and seeks to find the good in what they propose.

A true woman is gracious to every one. The shabbily clad and those low in social scale receive as much attention from her as their more fortunate sisters.

POND LILIES.

The Kind the Sly Little Muskrat Like Best.

About fifteen years ago I became quite enthusiastic in regard to introducing pond lilies into my grounds. Having a piece of low land where the water remained nearly up to the surface all summer, and near a creek from which more water could be obtained, if needed, I took out two hundred loads of muck as a beginning, using it for composting with barnyard manure. A near neighbor having caught the "muck fever," I allowed him to send his teams and take out a thousand loads; this, with my own excavations, gave me a very nice pond two to three feet deep, fifty feet wide, and nearly two hundred long. I first planted Nelumbium luteum, which was a great success, and the third year hundreds of plants bloomed, much to my own gratification and my neighbors who visited my lily-pond. Other varieties and species were introduced, and I began to feel pretty sure that I had at last struck one family of plants that needed no watering, but could take care of themselves, requiring no fertilizer, hoeing, weeding, staking, nor dusting with poisonous compounds for destroying their insect enemies. But enemies came, and worked so slyly and silently that they were not even suspected of being around until the glory of my lily-pond had disappeared; then it was discovered that muskrats were feasting on the tubers of the Nelumbium, but did not trouble those of the common water lily (Nymphaea odorata). The latter remains in great numbers and my pond is well-stocked with it, but of other species not one plant remains. Being thankful for small favors, I shall love and cling to the little water nymph so long as she clings to me.

How to Build a Greenhouse Wall.

As a matter of economy and permanency, all greenhouse walls should be built of locust posts to which are nailed first rough planking, then against which is tacked roofing of other paper used for lining; against that again are nailed the ordinary weather boards as a finish. A wall built in this way will last for twenty-five years except perhaps to renew the lower board, and in our experience we consider it a greater protection against frost than an eight-inch brick wall. In any of the Northern or Eastern States, where the thermometer remains for any length of time below zero, an eight-inch brick wall will not stand, if raised even four feet above ground, for greenhouse work. The moisture inside of the greenhouse, together with the high temperature, begets a warfare with the zero weather outside so that in a year or two the eight-inch greenhouse wall gets completely broken up, and has to be rebuilt.

A Cheap Plant Protector.

To keep bugs away from melons, frost from tender plants, the sun from cauliflower, etc., cut barrel hoops into pieces sixteen inches long, crossing them in the center and fastening together with a small wire nail. Then cover this frame with light muslin, leaving an inch at the end of each stick exposed, so they may be pushed into the ground, thus drawing the cloth close to the ground at the edges. This frame, being flexible, can be adjusted to a greater or less spread, as desired.

Staking Dahlias.

Dahlias should always have stout stakes driven close to the main stalk of the plant to give the support needed in case of high winds. If these stakes are painted green they will not be noticeable, and if they are taken indoors in autumn, when the dahlias are taken up, they will last several years. They are much neater than anything that "happens to be at hand" when you get around to attend to this necessary work.

Raising Turnips for Seed.

In Pennsylvania, where the growing of turnips for seed is a great industry, the seed is sown between the rows of corn, after the last working. This gives turnips about two inches in diameter, the most desirable size for seed purposes. In this manner a good crop is secured at a nominal cost; as they require no work after sowing. Sufficient roots can be grown with an acre of corn to set three acres for seed the following season.

The Right Time for Pruning.

The largest branch starts from a bud, which a slight movement of the fingers would have broken off. By going over young trees and rubbing off buds that appear when branches are not needed, there will be very little pruning to be done when the trees come into bearing.

Grift and Brains.

Grift is a good thing, an essential thing, but there must be brains to hold the lines. Holding on to a bad thing is just as disastrous as letting go of a good thing. Be sure you are not fooling with a buzzsaw and then don't worry about a few suspender buttons.

It Pays to Take Care of the Tools.

Implement should be returned to the tool-house, after using, and properly cleaned. If there is no plow-shoe make one. It will save the roads. Spades, hoes and similar tools should be kept sharp, by acquaintance with the grindstone.

The only man who never makes a mistake is the man who never does anything.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Don't Know It.

Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; a sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also derange out of order.

There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine you should have the best. Sold by druggists in 50c. and $1. size. You may have a sample bottle of this wonderful discovery and a book that tells more about it, both sent absolutely free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention reading this generous offer in this paper. Don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Swamp-Root, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y., on every bottle.

It Was a Vain Deception.

An eminent Episcopal bishop lately paid a visit of inspection to the State Hospital for the Insane at Matteawan, N. Y. Before introducing the bishop to one of the inmates the physician in charge warned him not to cross or contradict the unfortunate man, but to agree with all he said. "If you humor him," said the physician, "you will doubtless find him agreeable, intelligent and apparently sane, his only mania being that everybody is conspiring against him." The bishop assented and was soon conversing amicably with the lunatic, who finally said: "I see Queen Victoria is married again."

"Um—er—well—Oh! of course," assented the bishop, after some natural hesitation, in view of the Queen's death.

"So she's married President McKinley, has she?" queried the lunatic next. This arbitrary mating of two of the world's illustrious dead was almost too much for the bishop to sanction, even in the interests of peace and harmony, but he finally managed to acquiesce with fairly good grace.

"Well, who are you, anyway?" blurted out the lunatic. "I am a minister of the Gospel," replied the bishop.

"Humph!" retorted the lunatic, "you look like a parson and you dress like a parson, but you lie like a heathen."

The merry minstrel suddenly glinted his eye and began as follows: "I can always tell a married man from a single man. Do you know how, professor? Well, now, the single men sit straight in their seats and the married men sit with their backs bent." The merry minstrel's eyes apprehensively roved over the audience.

"Ha, ha!" he laughed. "See 'em straighten up! See 'em straighten up!" "This true. But there is this to be said about it. They straighten up only that they might take better aim with sundry small vegetables and antediluvian eggs. How the merry minstrel cursed the management for including that precious bit of humor in the company's repertoire!

Why, man alive, Noah told that old gig in the ark!

Jane in a Stew.

The new servant-maid was helping her mistress to prepare dinner, and all went well until the macaroni for the pudding was produced.

The girl looked in surprise as her mistress untied the packet of long white sticks; but when she carefully placed them in water the girl gave a choking gasp.

"Did you say, mem," she said, in an awed voice, "that you was going to make a puddin' of that?"

"Yes, Jane," said her mistress, "that is so. But you seem surprised. Have you never seen macaroni cooked before?"

"No, mem," said the girl, "I ain't! The last place I was at we always used them things to light the gas with."

"Yes, Johnnie, what is it?"
"Ma, isn't pa half bright?"
"Why, what makes you ask such a question?"

"Cause I heard Mr. High say that if pa were half bright he would never have married you."

"Mr. High is a bad man, Johnnie. Your papa is one of the brightest men this country ever produced."

The Keeley Institute in Portland, Maine, on Munjoy Hill, is successfully curing drunkards and drug users.

A little four-year-old had been told repeatedly that he must never ask for anything at the table, but should wait patiently until he was served. One day while dining at a neighbor's with his mother the little fellow was accidentally overlooked. Patience finally ceased to be a virtue, and in an audible whisper he said, "Mamma, do little boys go to heaven when they starve to death?"

When troubled with constipation try Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets. They are easy to take and produce no griping or other unpleasant effect.

Emergency Medicines.

It is a great convenience to have at hand reliable remedies for use in cases of accident and for slight injuries and ailments. A good liniment and one that is fast becoming a favorite if not a household necessity is Chamberlain's Pain Balm. By applying it promptly to a cut, bruise or burn it allays the pain and causes the injury to heal in about one-third the time usually required; and as it is an antiseptic it prevents any danger of blood poisoning. When Pain Balm is kept at hand a sprain may be treated before inflammation sets in, which insures a quick recovery.

For sale by G. R. Wiley, Bethel; E. L. Tibbets, Locke Mills; J. W. Bennett, Gilead; H. W. Dennison, West Bethel.

Catarrh

Is a constitutional disease. It originates in a scrofulous condition of the blood and depends on that condition. It often causes headache and dizziness, impairs the taste, smell and hearing, affects the vocal organs, disturbs the stomach. It is always radically and permanently cured by the blood-purifying, alterative and tonic action of The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative power, that they offer one Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address, F. J. A Purgative Pleasure.

If you ever took DeWitt's Little Early Risers for biliousness or constipation you know what a purgative pleasure is. These famous little pills cleanse the liver and rid the system of all bile without producing unpleasant effects. They do not gripe, sicken or weaken, but give tone and strength to the tissues and organs involved. W. H. Howell of Houston, Tex., says: "No better pill can be used than Little Early Risers for constipation, sick headache, etc." Sold by G. R. Wiley.

GORHAM, N. H.

At noon time and in the evening at the Cascades where they are building the new paper mills; they blow rocks before the crusher, and the signal is given one minute before they blow. As they gave the signal Thursday, D. G. Stoughton, the overseer of the brick-work, was hit, knocking seven of his teeth partly out, and injuring his chin quite severely. Friday another man went on the works as a carpenter, and fell off backwards, injuring himself severely. The boy who distributes the water among the men, was considerably hurt by the falling of a large hammer, which fell on his head. They have thirty-five brick-layers employed, and the work is progressing rapidly.

The head contains the brains, in case there are any. The thorax contains the heart and lungs; also the liver and lights. The abdomen contains the bowels, of which there are five—a, e, i, o, u, and sometimes w and y. A Large Order.

Probably the largest order ever given for paint in the State of North Carolina, was received by Odell Hardware Co., of Greensboro, N. C., from W. A. Irving, Esq., of Durham.

The order was for 5,000 gallons of Devco lead-and-zinc paint, to be used on the large Irving Mills and their cottages now being built in Harnett County.

Many of the leading paint manufacturers were eager to secure this order, and it speaks volumes that the preference was given to Devco lead-and-zinc, which is undoubtedly the foremost paint in this country today.—Greensboro (N. C.) Record.

Supreme Judicial Court, / October Term, 1903.
BETHEL WATER COMPANY and Auburn Savings Bank

Petitioners for Appointment of Trustee.
To the Honorable, the Justices of the Supreme Judicial Court of the State of Maine:

Your petitioners, the Bethel Water Company, a corporation duly organized under the laws of the State of Maine, and having its place of business at Bethel, in said County of Oxford, and the Auburn Savings Bank, a corporation existing under the laws of said State, and having its place of business at Auburn in said State, respectfully represent:

FIRST. That on the first day of October, A. D. 1890, the said Bethel Water Company made and executed its mortgage deed of trust to the Bethel Trust Company and to its successors, as trustees of the State of Maine, and all the real, personal and mixed property of or belonging to said Water Company, of whatever kind or description or wheresoever situated, then owned or possessed, or which might be acquired by said Company, which trust was accepted by the said Bethel Trust Company who held the said mortgage deed of trust, and the said Auburn Savings Bank, being interested as the owner of twenty of said bonds of the amount of ten thousand dollars.

SECOND. That the said Auburn Trust Company executed said trust until the twenty-ninth day of August, A. D., 1903, upon which date it, the said Trust Company, resigned said trust, a copy of which resignation is hereto annexed and marked Exhibit A; and that a vacancy now exists in said trust.

FOURTH. Your petitioners further represent that it is necessary that said trust should be continued and administered for the benefit of the holders of all of said bonds issued under said mortgage deed of trust, and for the performance of the agreements, conditions and trusts set forth in said mortgage.

Wherefore your petitioners respectfully pray that after such notice to all persons interested in the trust shall order, and upon hearing thereon, this honorable court will appoint The Lewiston Trust and Safe Deposit Company, a corporation existing under the laws of said State and having its place of business at Lewiston, in the County of Androscoggin, or some other suitable person or corporation to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of the said Auburn Trust Company and that it be ordered by this honorable court that the said property and other things described in said mortgage deed of trust as conveyed to and held by the said Auburn Trust Company shall vest in said trustee so appointed by this court without further conveyance thereof, and that said trustee shall have the rights and powers and be subject to the duties relating to said trust to the same extent and for the same purposes as the same were held by the said Auburn Trust Company; and that this court will make such decree as shall be proper and suitable in the premises to confirm the transfer of title herein prayed for.

And your petitioners further pray that this honorable court will order such notice as the court shall deem suitable to be given to all persons interested, to appear and be heard upon the subject matter of this petition when and where the court may determine; and that the court will make such further orders and decrees in the premises as, to it shall seem meet and proper.

PASQUALE'S STRATAGEM

It Worked Well 'For a Wedding Grew Out Of It.

BY WARREN MACVEAGH

A Plain Tale of Life and Love in an Obscure Corner of the Metropolis—The Somewhat Unconventional Romance of Julia Morelli and Pasquale Buco.

Julia Morelli lived on the top floor of the three-story rickety old building in the rear of the four-story rickety old building that looked out on Mulberry street. The four-story building had a little air and sunlight to give to its hundreds of men, women and children.

In the winter the building in the rear was comfortable as a home, but in the summer it was fearfully hot and everybody had to sleep on the roof. Here little Julia, for she was only fourteen years old and small for her age, could lie awake at night and look up at the stars and dream of Pasquale.

He was her neighbor. He lived in the front house. He was eighteen, and he was tall and brave, and gave her the peanuts and apples that he could not sell, so that she loved him and he loved her.

Julia's father was a shoemaker, and so had but little liking for Pasquale. All of the Bucos had been ne'er-do-wells, he declared; the father had died and left his only son nothing but a pushcart and a barrel of apples and a bag of peanuts. Pasquale had worked hard, he admitted, but he was not in a good position and his trade did not pay well, for the policeman ate half his stock in trade on some days, and on other days waited until he had sold three dollars' worth of apples and peanuts, and then arrested him and took him off to court, where he was fined all that he had made. No, Pasquale was not the man for Julia, her father declared, for she was extravagant and used to every comfort, such as shoes in the summer time and new shawls when the patriotic sons of Italy had their picnics in Lion Park. So Julia was told never to think of Pasquale again.

Of course, she never did think of him after that, for she was an obedient little girl, but it did make her heart sick thinking that she must never think of him again, and she was not the happiest girl in Little Italy. Pasquale declared that he was not a bit afraid to climb up the fire escape and that he knew there was no danger of her mother interrupting them, for he had just left her talking with old grandmother Estella about the elopement of Banker Lacio's wife. Julia said that it was wrong for him to come to see her in that way, but Pasquale was too wise a lover to talk.

Julia was sure that she loved Pasquale, and she knew that he loved her, too. So that it was all soon arranged. Pasquale said that he would make a formal offer of his heart and hand, and then, if her father would not let them get married, why they would do so anyhow and ask his consent afterward. Then he went away.

Julia heard him make his offer that night, and heard her father tell him to go ask for the moon.

The next morning when her mother went out to market she was ready. She crept down the stairs and then through the alley to Mulberry street and then down to the Bowery. Pasquale was waiting for her. They got on the elevated and went away up-town.

"Now we are safe," said Pasquale; "they will never seek for us up this far, and I have bought a shoeblack stand up here and we will soon be rich—and so happy."

"When are we to be married?" asked Julia, her heart beating violently at the mere prospect of so much happiness.

"You will trust me, won't you, my loved one?" said Pasquale. "I have a scheme. We will not be married yet."

"Oh, oh!" cried Julia, her heart sick with horror.

"Wait a moment, my precious," cried Pasquale. "I am going to take you to my aunt's house. She is good and kind, and will see that no harm comes to you. Besides, I have my scheme, you know."

"What is it?" asked Julia.

"Well," replied Pasquale, "you know America is a queer country, and men and women can't do everything they like just because they are in love with one another. Now, if I were to marry you at once, your father could have me arrested for taking you away, for you are only fourteen years old. You see, if I married you, he would do that, for he would hate me and try to do me some harm. But—"

and then Pasquale proceeded to explain the nature of the brilliant idea that had occurred to him, and which caused his little sweetheart to think him the cleverest fellow in all the world.

So Julia went to live with Pasquale's aunt and stayed there three days. She was happy, for Pasquale could come to see her whenever he wanted to, and there was no need for them to be always watching out for papa and mamma to interrupt them.

After three days Julia said that she wanted some clothes, for she had left everything at home. Pasquale volunteered to go and get them for her. She was afraid her father would kill him. But he said he was not afraid, and so she let him go.

In the evening he returned, but without her clothes.

"Your mother was in the house. She drove me away with her broom. See, she hit me here on the head."

Pasquale showed her the wound on his head. Julia kissed it and it did not hurt him any more.

The next day Pasquale went again to Mulberry street. He watched the old woman leave the house, then went in. He had no trouble getting into the rooms, but he couldn't find the little red shawl that Julia had told him to be sure to get. She wanted to wear that when she was married, she said. So Pasquale hunted high and low for it.

Suddenly Pasquale heard the door open. Julia's mother came in. She had the little red shawl about her shoulders. She had her basket on her arm. Pasquale could see the carrots and the onions and the beets. She saw Pasquale. Her surprise gave him an opportunity and Pasquale dashed past her. He seized the little red shawl as he ran and dragged it from her.

"Thieves!" cried the old woman. Pasquale was down the steps in a minute. The old woman ran after him.

"Thieves! Stop him!" she shrieked, and the carrots and onions and beets fell out of her basket all over the sidewalk.

Pasquale dashed into the Bowery. A policeman tripped him up and he fell, but still he held on to the little red shawl and the bundle of Julia's clothing.

The policeman sat on Pasquale's chest until the old woman came up. She said that he had robbed her.

Pasquale was taken to the station house. He sent for Julia to come down and see him at once. She arrived just as he was being taken to the Tombs. He told her to go to the Tombs and take a seat in the rear of the court so that nobody could see her. Julia pulled her shawl down over her eyes and was in her seat when Pasquale was brought in.

Julia's father was there. She could see that he was very angry.

Pasquale and Julia's father talked. "Where is my daughter?" cried the old man.

"Oh, never mind," said Pasquale coolly.

"You have taken her from me. You have stolen her. You are not married to her, are you, eh—eh, I say, are you?"

"Oh, never mind," answered Pasquale, in whose scheme this question—which he had fully expected—played a paramount part.

"You shall marry her," he cried.

"Oh, never mind," said Pasquale. The old man was furious. He stormed and he raved.

The old man declared that he would kill him if he did not marry the girl, now that he had taken her reputation away.

Pasquale was still quite cool and calm.

The old man wept. He pleaded and he begged. He would do anything. He would give anything. Pasquale began to pay him some attention.

"How much?" asked Pasquale.

Julia did not hear her father's reply. She saw his face beam with joy, however, and she almost wept when the old man shook his son-in-law by the hand.

Then the case was called. Julia's mother said that she had made a mistake, and that Pasquale had simply taken his wife's clothing.

The magistrate tore up the papers. Then Julia came forward at a signal from Pasquale, and with tears and kisses they all left the court.

At the City Hall they were married. Julia wore her red shawl, and as she and her husband walked out arm in arm to get into the carriage which her father had ordered, Pasquale said:

"What do you think of my scheme now, eh?"

Julia pressed his hand and looked up into his eyes and smiled.

Lunacy: Genius.

"Is there any sure test by which a fool can be distinguished from a wise man?" asked a pupil of Esquiro, the well known specialist, and the latter replied by inviting him to take breakfast with him the following morning.

When he arrived the pupil found two other guests, one of whom was elegantly dressed and apparently well educated, while the other was rather uncouth, noisy and extremely self-confident.

After breakfast the pupil rose to take leave and, as he shook hands with Esquiro, he said to him: "The problem is very easy after all. That quiet, well dressed man is certainly distinguished in some line, whereas the other is undoubtedly a lunatic and ought to be locked up."

"You are wrong, my friend," replied Esquiro, with a smile. "That quiet, well dressed man, who seems to talk so rationally, has for years labored under the delusion that he is God the Father, whereas the other man, whose exuberance and self-confidence have surprised you, is M. Honore de Balzac, the greatest French writer of the day."

Dogs as Policemen.

During the Boer war one heard a good deal of dogs as scouts, but they have now actually been enrolled in Denmark and Belgium as part of the police force. They are mostly drawn from the collie breed, and it takes about four months to train them to their work. They can cleverly climb walls after a disappearing fugitive or catch him by the neck and hold him fast without hurting him. Little help arrives. These humble additions to the police force are not only used for tracking special criminals, but are on duty every night from 9 o'clock till 5 the next morning, accompanied by a policeman. In Belgium they are used in the prisons to prevent attempts at escape, and since this plan has been adopted there has not been a single prisoner willing to test the powers of these canine warders.—London Tatler.
